Fair Labor Standards Act – A Few Common Mistakes

Under the FLSA, non-exempt employees are required to be paid for all time working for an employer, as well as time and a half for time spent working over 40 hours/week. This should come as no surprise. However, the FLSA is obviously more complicated than these two principles. Issues frequently arise concerning what is considered time spent working and how a collective bargaining agreement interacts with the FLSA. Other issues that our office has seen more frequently deal with how workers should be paid for overtime if they work multiple jobs at multiple salaries and whether time off is included in an employee's 40 hours/week.

Issue 1:

Is time spent at training for non-exempt employees considered compensable under the FLSA?

Many districts would like their noninstructional staff to attend trainings on subjects that will help them in school environments. Time spent at training during the workday should be paid at the employee's regular rate. However, most training sessions occur after the workday. In general, attendance at trainings will normally be compensable unless all four of the following criteria are met: (1) the hours are outside normal hours; (2) attendance is voluntary; (3) the subject material is not job related; and (4) no other work is concurrently being performed. If any one of these four elements is not met, employees must be paid for their time at training.

This analysis will be fact specific by analyzing each element separately. First, it should be easy to establish if the hours are during the normal workday - if the hours are during the workday, they must be paid, but if the hours are after the workday, move on with the analysis. Second, look at attendance requirements. Attendance is not voluntary if (1) the employer requires it; (2) the employee believes that not attending would adversely affect his/her working conditions: (3) not attending would adversely affect continued employment; or (4) disciplinary action would be taken for not attending. If the answer to any one of those is "yes," it would likely be considered time worked and compensable. However, if attendance appears voluntary, continue on with the analysis. Third, is the training directly related to the employee's job? It is likely directly related if it will help the employee perform his/her job more effectively or the training provides required skills for the employee's current job. There is likely no relationship if it is training the employee for another job or helping his/ her advancement to a higher job. For example, a bus driver attending training for clerical work is likely not directly related to his/her job, but a bus driver attending training on student management probably would be directly related. Only if the first three elements are met, does the fourth element need to be considered - will work be performed to benefit the employer during attendance? If the answer is no, the training is likely not compensable under the FLSA.

Wait a second – my district's collective bargaining agreement requires certain non-exempt employees to attend training after the workday and does not specify that those employees will be paid for this time (i.e. teacher aides). Haven't the District and the union negotiated that training time will not be paid or that it was part of a negotiated raise? Unfortunately, the FLSA does not allow employees to waive their rights under the law by agreement or contract, including the hours to be counted as hours worked. Thus, employees are, in most cases, entitled to be paid for time spent at mandatory trainings if they occur after the normal workday, regardless of contractual language.

Issue 2:

If an employee works two positions for the District and he/she works over 40 hours/week, what is his/her overtime rate?

It depends. In most cases, if an employee works overtime with two different jobs, the overtime rate must be the weighted average of both jobs. In other words, add up the earnings from all rates and divide by the total number of hours for all jobs to obtain the regular rate. Then, take the regular rate and multiply by 1.5 to determine the overtime rate. To make it easier, below is an example.

An employee works as a bus driver at $17/hour for 30 hours. The same employee works as a cleaner for $11/ hour for 20 hours. Therefore, the employee worked 50 hours for the district in a workweek.

30 hours x $17/hour + 20 hours x $11/hour = $730 (total regular rate compensation)

$730 (total regular rate compensation) ÷ 50 hours worked = $14.60 (regular rate)

$14.60 (regular rate) x 1.5 = $21.90 (overtime rate)

$14.60 (regular rate) x 40 hours = $584 (total straight time earnings)

$21.90 (overtime rate) x 10 (overtime hours)

$219 (total overtime earnings)

Total compensation $803

On the other hand, the FLSA allows the employee to agree before the work begins that he/she will get overtime based on the type of work being done at the time he/she is over 40 hours. Using the above example, if such agreement were in place, let's say the employee went over 40 hours while he was a cleaner making $11/hour. The computation for overtime would be based on time and one half of $11/hour or $16.50 for time worked over 40. Such agreements are rare, but may be included in collective bargaining agreements. For instance, there could be language stating, "In the case of services provided in two or more areas, overtime rates shall be determined based on the rate for work being done at the time the employee exceeds 40 hours." However, unless it specifically states otherwise, the overtime rate for two positions will likely be based on the weighted average of both jobs.

Issue 3:

Does the FLSA require time off to be counted towards the 40 hours?

No. The FLSA does not count time off during a holiday break, vacation or sick leave, with or without pay, as time worked. However, the FLSA allows employers to give benefits that go above and beyond its requirements. This means that there could be district policy, CBAs or past practices in place that allow time spent away from work for holidays, vacations or sick leave to count towards the 40 hour workweek. If such policy, CBA or practice exists at your district, it would have to continue unless negotiated away. If no such practice exists at your district, retain the status quo and do not count time off towards the 40 hours.

In sum, due to the prevalence and cost of FLSA lawsuits, it is always better to make sure that all practices and agreements are in line with the FLSA. Our office would recommend reaching out with any questions and certainly recommend getting all contractual language reviewed prior to implementation to avoid these pitfalls.

Reasonable Assurance Notice Before Vacation Periods and Holiday Recess

Based on a December 7, 2017 decision from the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York, Third Department, it is the advice of our office that reasonable assurance letters should be sent to all qualified per diem employees before all holiday recesses.

The case in question is the Matter of Papapietro v. Rochester CSD. As of this writing, the case may be found at: http://decisions.courts.state.ny.us/ad3/Decisions/2017/524954.pdf. The claimant in this matter was a per diem substitute teacher for the Rochester City School District and worked for the District "at least three days" at the end of December 2015. He applied for unemployment insurance benefits over the holiday recess due to a "lack of work" related to the recess and that he did not receive a letter of reasonable assurance for employment after the break.

It should be noted that this decision from the Third Department was from an August 12, 2016 interpretation of the law by the Unemployment Insurance Appeal Board (hereinafter "Board"), see Unemployment Appeal Board Decision Number 590044 (http://uiappeals.ny.gov/uiappealdecisions/590044-appeal-decision.pdf). However, the August 12th ruling from the Board was its second decision related to this matter. It appears that the Board had previously made a determination in the claimant's favor on July 27, 2015, see Unemployment Appeal Board Decision Number 585960 (http://uiappeals.ny.gov/ uiappeal-decisions/585960-appeal- decision.pdf). Knowing what happened in these prior decisions helps explain the Third Department's decision.

The claimant's initial application for benefits over the holiday break was denied based on a finding that the claimant had reasonable assurance, but then he requested a hearing on the matter before an Administrative Law Judge (hereinafter "ALJ"). On May 6, 2015, the ALJ sustained the initial decision to deny benefits. The claimant appealed that decision to the Board. In its July 27, 2015 decision, the Board found that there was no offer of reasonable assurance for employment after the holiday recess and gave the claimant $840 in benefits. Unemployment Appeal Board Decision Number 585960.

The available record is not completely clear, but it appears that there was an attempt to recover an overpayment from the claimant in the amount of $840, which was the same amount that the claimant received after the Board's July 27, 2015 decision. The initial determinate from the Department of Labor found that there was reasonable assurance and charged the claimant with an overpayment of $840 to be recovered. On April 13, 2016, a telephone conference was held with the parties and the ALJ. The ALI reopened the claimant's application for benefits and overruled the initial determination to denv benefits. The District appealed to the Board.

The Board sided with the District and found that the claimant had received reasonable assurance of employment after the holiday recess. Its decision was based on testimony from a District witness who explained how per diem substitutes were given "priority" for work after such a holiday break. The Board determined that it was not necessary for the District to provide individual notice to per diem employees of assurance or how the substitute "priority system" worked. The Board stated that it was sufficient that the District could explain how the "priority system" worked and the District made "a good-faith effort to contact the claimant for work" in the week following the holiday break. The Board did not seek a repayment of the $840, but reversed the ALJ. Unemployment Appeal Board Decision Number 590044.

The Third Department, in a short but direct decision, noted that interpretation of the applicable law is a matter for the court to decide and it explicitly declined to give any deference to the Board's interpretation. In reaching its decision the Third Department cited to a prior case that addressed this issue, which is as follows:

"Pursuant to Labor Law § 590 (10), a claimant who is employed in an instructional capacity by an educational institution is precluded from receiving unemployment insurance benefits during 'any week commencing during an established and customary vacation period or holiday recess, not between such academic terms or years, provided the claimant performed services for such institution immediately before such vacation period or holiday recess and there is a reasonable assurance that the claimant will perform any services . . . in the period immediately following such vacation period or holiday recess'" (Matter of Scott[Commissioner of Labor], 25 AD3d 939, 939-940 [2006]).

The Third Department stated that the 'reasonable assurance' noted above "often takes the form of a letter from an employer assuring a per diem substitute teacher of future employment opportunities," and specifically rejected the Board's conclusion that the District did not need to provide notice of reasonable assurance to a per diem substitute before a holiday recess. The Court reversed the Board's finding in favor of the District since the claimant was not sent a reasonable assurance letter or "any other form of notice that made a representation regarding claimant's employment after the recess."

What does this decision mean for your district?

The Third Department hears appeals from Unemployment Insurance Appeal Board decisions. Therefore, this case should be considered precedent setting; and it will remain precedent setting unless the decision is appealed to the New York Court of Appeals and overturned or if the legislature acts to clarify the law in the favor of school districts.

Before this becomes an issue, a per diem employee would have to first qualify for benefits. A brief refresher on how an employee qualifies for these benefits may be found at: https://www.labor.ny.gov/ui/ claimantinfo/beforeyouapplyfaq.shtm. If you believe your district has employees who qualify for unemployment insurance then reasonable assurance letters need to be provided.

An example of a notice of reasonable assurance for a substitute teacher should include written or verbal notification that the substitute will be placed on a substitute list, that the list will be used for placing substitutes, there is a reasonable expectation that a substitute position will exist, and that he or she can expect to earn at least 90% of the prior term's remuneration (including wages and benefits). See https://www.labor.ny.gov/ ui/claimantinfo/school-personnel-faq. shtm#7.

It is strongly suggested that to adequately protect your district from unemployment insurance claims from per diem workers over holiday breaks that the district should send reasonable assurance notice letters to these employees before any holiday recess.
